Deb,

I am thinking seriously about retiring mainly because it looks like I can afford to do so. Especially if I start my Social Security in September(at age 62). We will have 3 pensions amounting to nearly $3000 a month (not including social security), the house and cars are paid for, and we'll have $100,000 in savings.

I will do something to make money, either from another job or some sort of business. And there is the possibility that Carol will get some income from her neurofeedback business.

This job is not good for my psychological health. I get no respect. The top lady is not receptive to suggestions and ideas from anyone else, and I am not happy if I can't do something creative. I don't have enough to do to keep me busy.

Somebody did tell the boss lady that I was thinking about retiring and she told me today she wants to meet with me next week. I'll let you know how that goes.

Steve
