Remember when we were in Chelsea and I was wondering about that what that big, tall old building a few blocks from downtown was? There was a story about it on WKAR this morning. It is the Chelsea Milling Company, where they make Jiffy Mix - you know, those little boxes of mixes for biscuits and other stuff? It has been there since the 40's and is still going strong. It is a family business. They give free tours, and some of the original equipment is still in use. They have never advertized, which allows them to keep prices low and compete with the big guys.

The band "The Lost Marbles" will be playing at the Blue Gill Grill (formerly Plum Crazy) in Haslett tonight at 9:30. The band members are parents of children who go to Marble school in East Lansing. One of them works for MERS.

Brigid: We couldn't find the Value Pak.

I don't have much to do at work today. Maybe I'll leave early.
