

November 14, 2004

Nina,

Yes, we have thought of moving to Canada, but not seriously. Too much family here. The Democrats had better come up with something new, because what they tried in this election and the previous election didn't work. It should not have been that hard to beat George W.

One of these days, I am going to put up my own website with all my political essays. One thing the Democrats could do is promote direct democracy, then try to win back the one-issue voters (abortion, gun control) by saying those issues should be decided by a vote of the people.

The attached is supposed to be a garment care label on some clothing produced by an American company.

Steve