(To Deb)

Only one, for $45. It was 3 4x6 pictures of the sleeping bear, framed together. My prices were too high. No plans yet for how I'm going to sell the other 22 pictures. 13 are framed, 9 just matted. I sent you an email a week or so ago about this - did you get it?

I selected 14 of my photos and had them professionally scanned and cleaned up. Cost me $10 each. But now they are preserved forever, and prints can be made easily. Actually, I don't yet have the digital images, but hope to in a day or so. Would you like copies? If so, what format? Photoshop (.psd)? Or .tiff?

I was in Boulder/Denver this last week with Tom and Amy. Amy lives in Denver, but Tom wanted to stay at the Silver Saddle, a motel we stayed at on 2 previous visits. We did some hiking - saw a bunch of coyote pups. Amy has had an eyelid and face lift, looks good except she still wears her black eye makeup. She has a crush on a (married) member of the band Splitlip Rayfield - she is sort of a groupie. Otherwise, she seems to prefer guys 10 years younger than her. She just got a new job, makes about $60 thousand a year, but she's afraid she won't be able to handle the job. Keeps talking about "if she gets fired". She designs training programs.

Tom and his girlfriend are renting a house with a little yard. Two of her kids live with them. I think the boy is about 8 and the girl is 14. There is also a 16-year old son with them this summer. Tom seems happy. He still works at the Church of Scientology (the "Org") and delivers pizzas on weekends. He is overweight - big belly. His girlfriend Kelli works at the Org some, but just got a 2 or 3-day a week job doing bookkeeping for a dentist's office.

Walt says he's been selected to plan the next sibling trip. I think he said he wants to go to the Badlands. Sounds good to me.
