

January 15, 2006

Jason,

Thanks for sending the Walterisms. And thanks for putting on the party. At the party, Max Thiele told me about a fishing trip he made long ago on the Pere Marquette. He was fishing in the middle of the river when a couple chicks in a canoe came along and he had to duck under the water to avoid getting hit. His waders filled up and when he tried to empty them on the river bank by lying with the waders up the incline, the water rushed out and over his face and nearly drowned him.

I told him about your fish stories and emailed him the Trail Creek story. That is the only one I have in electronic form. If you get a chance, send him your Pere Marquette story. Cindy's email is cthiele@accn.org. Send me a copy, too.

Steve