

December 28, 2006

Laura,

That would be fine with me. The trips start March 18 and they do trips weekly, it looks like. The first 2 trips in April are the "Waterpocket Fold", which looks great (www.ecohike.com/fold.htm). If we sign up before the end of the year, we get a discount (2006 prices instead of 2007 prices). Waterpocket Fold is the longest and most expensive trip - 6 days, $1375 (2006) $1445 (2007). I prefer a trip without "exposure" which I think means that you will be on trails where if you make a misstep you could fall to your death. They don't use "exposure" in the description of this trip, but:

"This trip is rated from moderate to challenging. It will include one day when we move camp. The hike into our first camp is 5 miles. This day is a challenging way to start the trip; it includes an 800' descent with a steep pitch. The hike out of our second and last camp is six miles."

I am willing.

Steve

--- laura barden <lauragrace56@yahoo.com> wrote:

> Hey Steve

>

> Would you consider an early spring hiking trip???

>

> I was looking over the schedule for 2007 and was > wondering???? Spring would be a better time for me, > early that is, like early April. What do you think?

>

> Laura