

February 28, 2007

Laura,

I enjoyed the article about Hell's Backbone Grill. We ate breakfast there the first day. Very nice, fancy food. Expensive. I remember waiting too long to be greeted and seated. That was the only meal I had in Boulder because the first night, we stopped for dinner before we got to Boulder and at the end of the hike, we left Boulder before dinner. We ate late that night. At the only place we could find still open, the cheapest meal on the menu was $24. Artsy-fartsy food.

I have not yet reserved a rental car. And I don't yet have wading shoes.

Steve