Hi,

We have 2 pileated woodpeckers in our back yard this morning. They are chipping away at our dead and dying elm trees. They've been there for about 45 minutes. I'd take a picture, but the sun is behind them. Attached is a picture I took of one last winter.

We saw a good movie yesterday - "Lars and the Real Girl". It is about a shy young man who gets himself a full-size dummy and treats her as if she is his real girlfriend. It is funny, but not a comedy. Nothing offensive in it. Very heart-warming. It is mostly about how his family and the community handles it. It had me all choked up.
