Deb,

Thanks for the scans. I'll add them to my website.

I talked to Mom last night. She said that sometime recently, she was cleaning her humidifier with what she thought was vinegar and it turned out to be bleach. Then she tried something else - vinegar maybe - and the combination produced a gas that affected her breathing. She went to the nurse or whatever. Later they checked her room and found that the gas level was still 14%.

It has been sunny and in the 70s here. Expecting rain Monday, then cooler for the next few days - 60s. We haven't done much yet. I've been running in the morning.
