Jennifer,

I'm interested in politics, or actually, policy, as you can see from my website steveharrypublicpolicy.com. I am an atheist and I have attended atheist meetings for a year or so, but I'm not really interested in talking about atheism and religion. I'd like to talk about taxes and unions and national health care - stuff that really matters. Our group would have some big disagreements on this kind of thing. At a meeting before last November's election, we had supporters of Obama (of course), but also Ralph Nader and Ron Paul!

As for recreational activities - I don't bowl, but like hiking, canoeing, birding, movies, plays. Just meeting for a restaurant meal would be fun.
