Dear Edith,

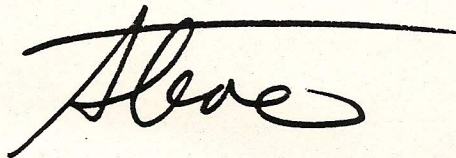

Since you studied religion in college, I thought you might be interested in this paper written by Amy. She is a senior in Religious Studies at MSU. She really likes it. She's even learning Sanskrit. She's also into Transcendental Meditation. She wants to get a Ph.D. and become a college professor.

I have finally started annulment proceedings, so you should be getting something from the Catholic Church soon. Carol's first marriage and my first three marriages have to be annulled so that we can marry in the Church. We already got married in a civil ceremony in September, and we bought a house on the Grand River in northwest Lansing. We love it. The main living area is on the second floor, with big windows in back looking over the river. We can waste hours at the window watching the birds and squirrels. Carol's 20 year old son is living with us and going to MSU.

Son Tom is living in East Lansing and delivering pizzas for a living. He has talked about going back to school.

I have a war going on with my boss at work. I wouldn't feel like I was earning my pay if I didn't do battle with management. State government is really screwed up here; is it the same everywhere?

I hope you and your daughter are well.
