

Monday noon

Just a note----

D on't fix up those blankets to mail to us because Victor was over last night and said he would be home either this week-end or next and he would stop for them. If you can I wish you would hunt up about four of those paper-mill blankets.

School really got in action today and so far I have attended three classes and have another one to go to in about ten minutes. I guess it is going to be alright once we learn to study again, but that is going to be a job in itself.

More later in the week---
